

WEST of USA

2003

A photographic and philosophic journey through the nature-loving West of America with its diverse, bizarre and fascinating landscapes. Let's visit California, Nevada, Utah and Arizona.

© Welcome to Northern Americas' West, where nature is still mightier than man. ☺
Californian Pacific Coastline along Highway No. 1 near Jenner (50 miles north of San Francisco) – August 2002

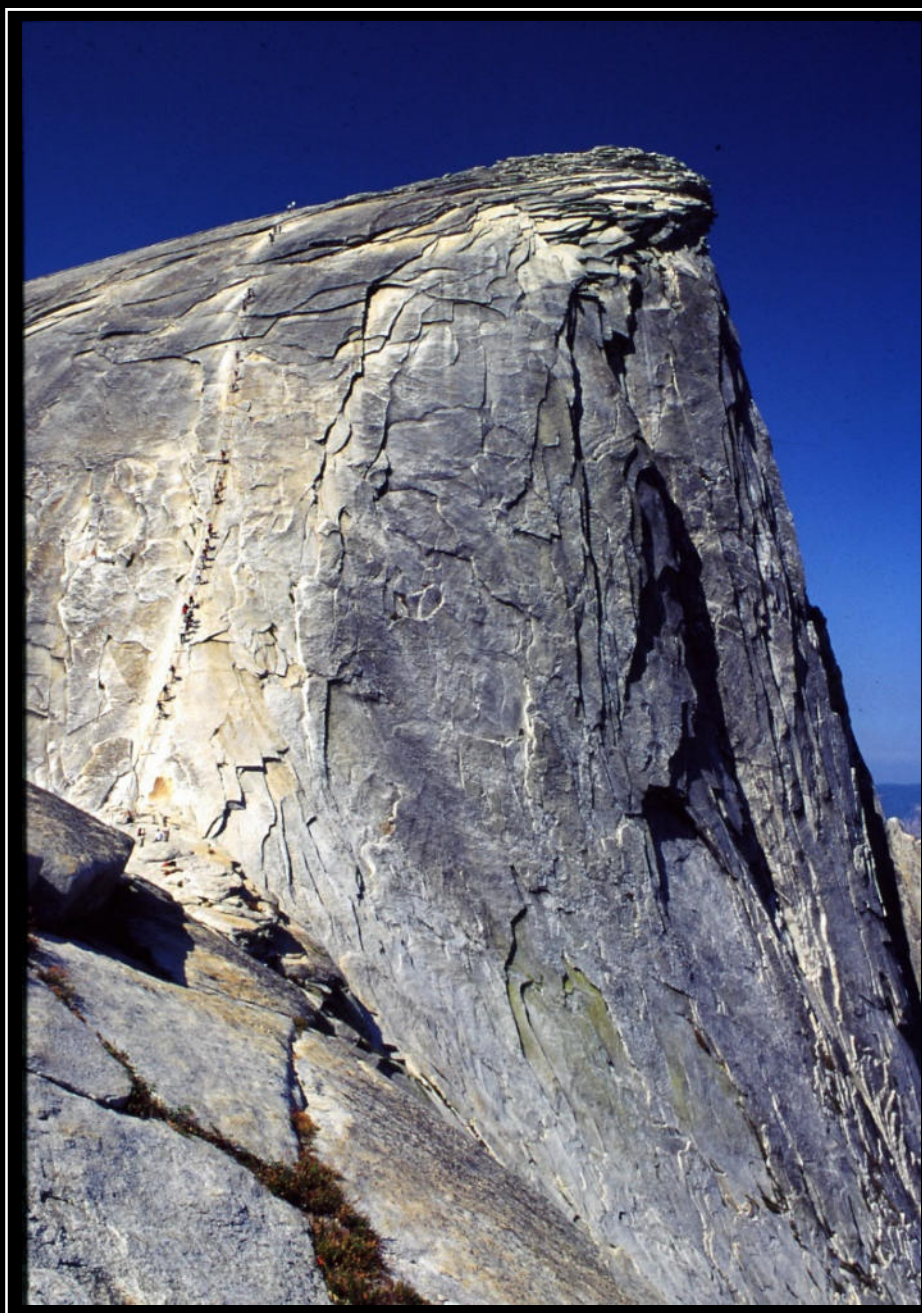

☺ Step bravely and freely through the gate of uncertainty to discover something new and attractive. ☺

Entrance to the earthy Peekaboo Loop in Bryce Canyon National Park – August 2002

☺ Enjoy the sunrays: they will give you warmth and light for the glassy office days. ☺

Architectonic bright lights in the Finance District of San Francisco – August 2002

☺ Stop for a moment in front of the reachable goal to enjoy the sight of the final stresses and strains. ☺

Last ascent to the dippy top of the Half Dome (1463 m) in Yosemite National Park - August 2002

☯ Learn from each of the waves, which drift you not always softly to the shore of your life. ☺

Californian Pacific Coastline (Anchor Bay) along Highway No. 1 (ca. 80 miles north of San Francisco) – August 2002

☺ Walk also on those paths, which apparently pass by the big and tempting goals. ☺

View of the three big "Butts" at the entrance of Monument Valley - August 2002

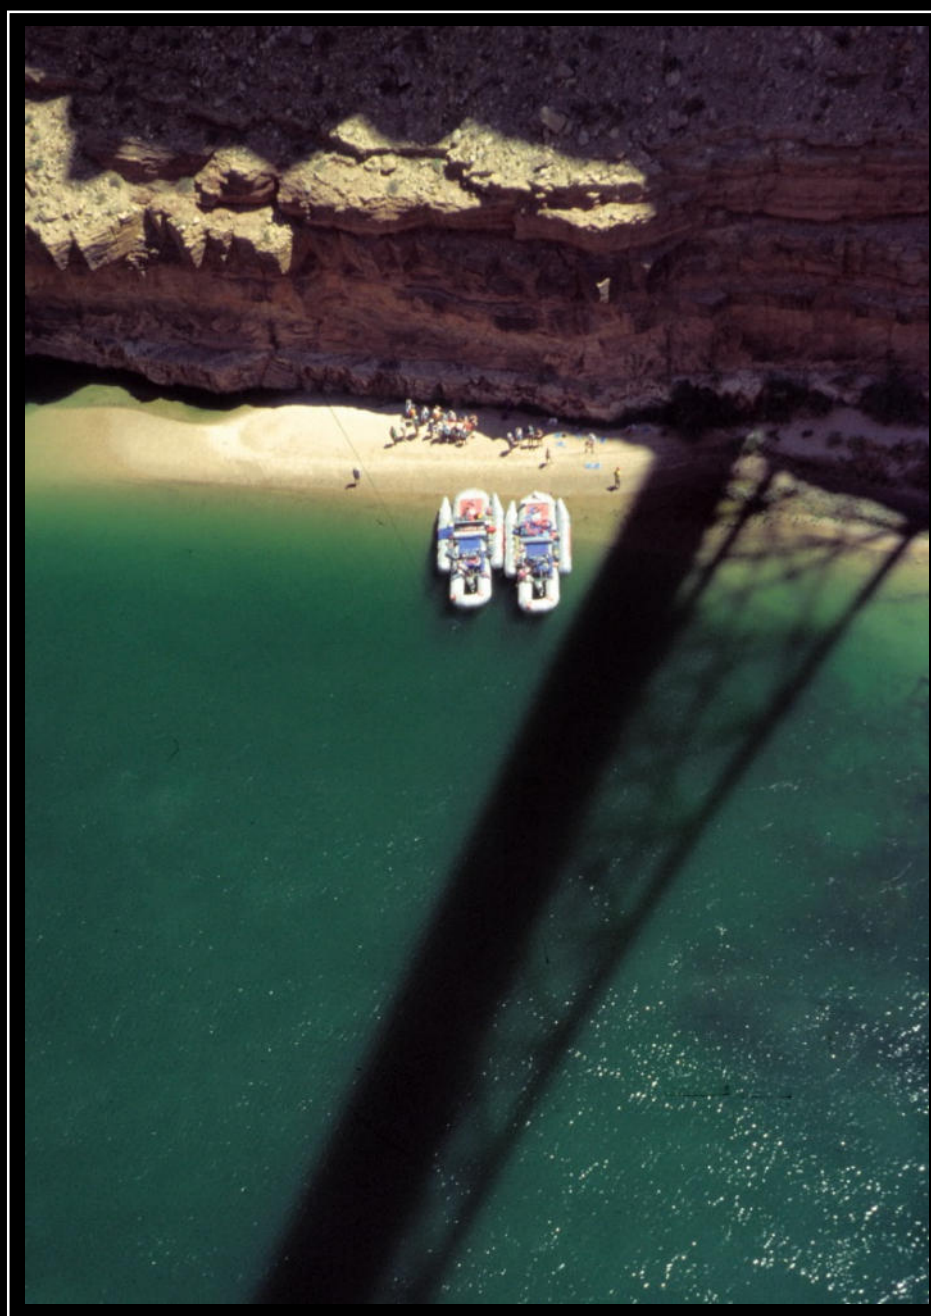

☯ No matter which of your sides you show, let them be an honest, colorful mirror of you soul. ☺

“Queen” of mission churches in Santa Barbara with “vivid” well – August 2002

☺ Do not stay too long in an environment in which you obviously do not belong to. ☺

"Sahara"-Dunes near Pismo Beach (between Los Angeles and San Francisco) - August 2002

☺ Look forward to any journey, which starts totally different from what you had imagined. ☺

Colorado River meanders through the Marble Canyon - August 2002

☺ Do not restrict yourself by anybody as such, that you harden like a stone - and the other way round. ☺

Stone in a symbiotic relationship with a "stranded" piece of wood during a walk in Andrew Molera State Park (Big Sur) – August 2002

☺ Take always the time and lightness to fly free like a bird up to the sun. ☺

Sunset near Mendocino along Highway No. 1 – August 2002

☺ Keep on growing into the sky - alone, together - and burst your surroundings with perseverance. ☺

Twin-Tree while walking the Navajo Loop in Bryce Canyon National Park – August 2002

☺ Find warmth, joy and peace in your heart, instead of following blinding splendor and glare. ☺

Rebuilt skyline of New York in the ocean of lights of Las Vegas - August 2002

☺ Reflect proudly the gorges, furrows and layers, the prospects and insights of your life. ☺
